CBM to Participate in Associations @ Work Conference Hosted by American Society of Association Executives

CBM Principal Julia Lafferty to Ensure CBM Stays Current with Association Industry Trends

September 24, 2017 (Bethesda, MD & Washington, DC) – Julia Lafferty, principal at Councilor, Buchanan & Mitchell, P.C. (CBM), will participate in the 2017 Associations @ Work Conference, hosted by the American Society of Association Executives in Baltimore, MD from October 15-17. CBM, a Bethesda, MD-based accounting and advisory firm, has delivered audit, accounting, tax and consulting solutions to trade/membership associations for nearly 100 years.

“ASAE is the foremost and most reputable organization dedicated to advocating for associations throughout the nation,” said Ms. Lafferty. “It is important to participate to learn about ongoing trends within the association industry’s accounting, operations and leadership space, which helps CBM remain current with the solutions we provide clients.”

Associations @ Work, formerly the ASAE Finance, Business Operations and Human Resources Conference, will provide two and a half days of professional education and networking among executive, finance, operations, development, fundraising and human resources leaders who work for associations, and peers who serve the association industry.

“I look forward to learning more about the concerns and challenges facing these institutions,” continued Ms. Lafferty. “As our involvement with ASAE deepens, CBM positions itself to apply our professional expertise and advance the success of trade and membership organizations throughout Washington, DC, Baltimore and the Mid-Atlantic region.”

Ms. Lafferty has more than 25 years of experience delivering audit and accounting solutions to not-for-profit organizations including associations. She has drafted accounting policies and procedures, consulted on operational efficiency reviews and agreed upon procedures, and consulted on federal grant compliance and reporting.
